PREFACE.

At the present time there appears to be a general desire among enlightened Englishmen, that the Natives of India should have the advantages of education put within their reach. It is only by a few, however, that an English education is attainable; to the great mass of Hindoos knowledge must flow in their own tongues. For my own part, having had the great advantage of an introduction to Western Science and Literature, I am desirous of offering my mite towards the work of instructing my less fortunate countrymen: and trusting that any attempt, however humble, to throw open the stores of History, and more especially of Indian History, to a large section of the population of this peninsula, will be looked upon with a favourable eye, I venture to place before the public the following pages, and intreat for them the support of the English as well as the Hindoo community.

The work is a free exposition of that part of Murray's India which treats of the downfal of Tippoo Sultan, and obtained from the President and Governors of the Madras University the "Patcheappah's Vernacular prize" for the year 1849.

The exposition, though not free from errors, was recommended for publication after revisal, by some of the first Mahratta scholars at the Presidency. It has now been revised with considerable care, and is declared by the Acting Mahratta Translator to Government to be free from faults of any importance; though the idiom and phraseology in some places accord rather with the Mahratta used throughout the Carnatic, than that spoken in the neighbourhood of Poonah. This, however, can scarcely be considered a fault, as the book would be less intelligible in the Madras Presidency, if the dialect were different from the one in use. As regards any inelegancies and other minor blemishes, which may be detected by a critical eye, it is trusted that some allowance will be made in favour of youth and inexperience. The expense of the work will be principally defrayed by subscriptions; and I purpose to hand over any profits that may arise to the Native Vernacular Educational Society, in whose efforts I take a lively interest.

A. RAMACHUNDRA ROW.
